Professional Services

Building on its entry into the UK in 2025, Sequana has partnered with INFRACO to combine established UK infrastructure delivery expertise with international experience in water security and major infrastructure.

THE PARTNERSHIP

INFRACO joins Sequana in a partnership that brings together complementary expertise, established client relationships and a shared commitment to delivering complex water and infrastructure projects across the UK.

ABOUT INFRACO

Founded in 2020, INFRACO is a UK-based specialist utilities and infrastructure consultancy led by Managing Director Andy Findlater. The business provides utilities management, project and program management, commercial management and delivery assurance services across the water, energy, environment and major infrastructure sectors. INFRACO has built a strong reputation for practical, client-focused delivery, supporting major infrastructure programs including Thames Tideway, Lower Thames Crossing, HS2 and East West Rail. Its experienced team and established client relationships provide a strong foundation for continued growth.

BACKGROUND TO THE PARTNERSHIP

Sequana's expansion into the UK reflects its ambition to bring Australian water security and infrastructure expertise to a market facing significant investment and increasingly complex challenges. England and Wales' AMP8 investment program represents more than £104 billion in planned water infrastructure expenditure between 2025 and 2030, creating substantial demand for specialist advisory and delivery capabilities. INFRACO's established UK presence, strong client relationships and proven delivery experience complement Sequana's expertise in water security, desalination, engineering and environmental advisory. This represents an important step in Sequana's international growth strategy, strengthening its ability to support clients across major UK infrastructure programs.

THE VENDORS PERSPECTIVE

“For our clients nothing changes. Same people, same contacts, same standards. What changes is the depth behind us. Our team now has access to international water and infrastructure expertise that very few UK consultancies can offer.”

ANDY FINDLATER, MANAGING DIRECTOR, INFRACO

THE FUTURE

Sequana and INFRACO will build on their complementary expertise and established client relationships to pursue opportunities across the UK's water and infrastructure sector. The partnership provides a platform for continued growth, combining INFRACO's local delivery experience with Sequana's international expertise in water security, engineering and environmental advisory.
